

Annual Burlingame Award Lecture Burlingame Awardee Allan Tasman, M.D.

The Social Determinants of Mental Health: Putting the Social Back into the Biopsychosocial Model.

presented by

Allan Tasman, M.D.

Allan Tasman, MD is Emeritus Professor, Chair of Psychiatry (1991-2015), and Schwab Endowed Chair in Social and Community Psychiatry at the University of Louisville. He became known nationally in psychiatric education, community service, and as a highly regarded clinician at the University of Connecticut (1976-1991). Recognition of his many collaborative and transformational administrative leadership accomplishments have led to national and international involvement in strategic planning and policy issues, particularly regarding mental health disparities due to socio-economic and cultural factors. In the early 1990's he conceptualized and spearheaded implementation of Passport Health Plan, an innovative nationally recognized non-profit managed care organization which became Kentucky's second largest Medicaid provider. His research over four decades has focused on the neurophysiology of cognitive processes. Publications include 38 books and over 340 other scientific publications. He founded two scientific journals and is founding lead Editor for all five editions of an internationally acclaimed comprehensive textbook, now named Tasman's Psychiatry. He served as president of five national and international organizations, including the American Psychiatric Association. As Secretary for Education of the World Psychiatric Association, he produced global guidelines for medical student and resident psychiatric education, with special attention to programs in resource poor countries. He has received multiple national and international awards for leadership, educational excellence, and distinguished professional service, including Fellow of the Royal College of Psychiatrists of the United Kingdom, and Honorary Fellow of the WPA.
