

War, Trauma, and the Need to Feel 'Seen'

presented by

Shannon Ford, MD, DFAPA

Shannon Ford, MD, DFAPA is an Army Psychiatrist currently working at Walter Reed National Military Medical Center (WRNMMC) where she spends much of her time teaching medical students and psychiatry residents and fellows. She initially joined the military as a Military Intelligence officer, deploying to both Afghanistan and Iraq before changing career course to attend medical school at Uniformed Services University in Bethesda, Maryland. She completed her residency and both consultation-liaison and geriatric psychiatry fellowships at WRNMMC. Her interest and experience in working with victims of trauma were developed through seeing military medicine through all of these experiences. Outside of the hospital, she enjoys trail running to places that are otherwise difficult to get to and have beautiful views.
