

Dear Parents & Guardians,

As the cold and snowy weather continues, we are reflecting on warm summer memories. With this in mind, we are eager to attempt curbing the length of the school year by using our remote learning tools to our advantage.

Our next snow days, which may very well be next week, will be Remote Learning Days as you have seen with many of the state's public schools. In anticipation of such, your student is bringing home materials in order to supplement their present resources. Please watch the news for information on when we will be going remote.

It is important to us to hear your feedback afterwards, to make decisions as to continuing remote learning days when the weather is poor, or to have a traditional Snow Day. You will be sent information about a follow-up survey after the weather has settled.

Thank you for your cooperation and understanding,
