Dear Education Provider,

The Webb Schools are happy to invite you to the Institute of Living for our third annual day conference;

Suicide Prevention in Schools: What to do when things are not OK

Addressing mental health is a key component to any student’s successful academic experience. During this conference you will be introduced to a number of Behavioral Health Network speakers and the techniques The Webb Schools are constantly utilizing to address the diverse Mental Health needs of our students. One such method involves how to partner with parents when students need additional support. We are eager to include you on our initiative to create school systems that address the prevention, intervention, and post-care of tragic mental health outcomes.

This conference was designed specifically with you in mind as a professional and a whole person. We know your student body because they are our students too. This conference will provide the tools you need to work with the most taxing of mental health scenarios.

We look forward to seeing you,

Administration
